

Keynote on- To teach is to heal!

Gusi Peace Laureate, former Minister of Education, Thakur S Powdyel, is an educator by choice, conviction and passion with particular interest in Education as the Noble Sector, Institutional Integrity, National-Self Respect, Moral Literacy, Ecological Well-Being and Gross National Happiness. Deeply invested in the outer and inner life of his nation, Professor Powdyel has travelled across the length and breadth of his beautiful country and represented Bhutan at many important fora around the world. He has been awarded an Honorary Doctorate in Innovation Education for his significant contribution to global education thought. Powdyel's little book, "My Green School", has been translated into some 18 major languages around the world and taught at many institutions. Other books by Professor Powdyel include "As I Am, So Is My Nation", "Gyal-Khab: Reflections on State, Citizen, and Citizenship Education", "Right of Vision & Occasional Views", "Moments, Milestones, Memories", and "The Light of My Life" (principal author). Professor Powdyel is also a recipient of the Distinguished Service Award, Global Education Award, and Institutional Award: the Honour of Druk Thuksey, for his contribution to nation-building and advancement of holistic learning at home and beyond. Former Member of Parliament, Professor Powdyel has often been described as the most widely foot-travelled education minister in the world. He sits on several important international boards, jury and panels.
